

PAX AMERICANA

And, hast thou slain the Jabberwock?

Spring 2003

In This Issue:

SPECIAL REPORTS

•Assessing Biological Weapons:
Threat, Proliferation, and Countermeasures

CARRIBEAN

•From Slavery to Indentured Servitude
•Prisoners of America

PACIFIC RIM

•Labeling State Deviance:
Patterns and Dynamics in the U.S-North Korea
Security Relationship

MIDDLE EAST

•Identity Crisis: Persian Iranians versus Islamic Iranians
leading to the 1978 Social Movement in Iran
•Democratic Transition in Post-War Iraq
•Kurdish Autonomy in Northern Iraq Post-Saddam Hussein

SOUTH ASIA

•India, Pakistan, and Kashmir:
Understanding "the most dangerous place in the world"

LATIN AMERICA

•The Paradox of Cuban Health Care
•Can Lula Provide Hope for a Weary MST?

EUROPE

•Opportunities and Threats of EU Enlargement

BOOK RATE

International Relations Journal
San Francisco State University
Department of International Relations
1600 Holloway Avenue
San Francisco, CA 94132 USA

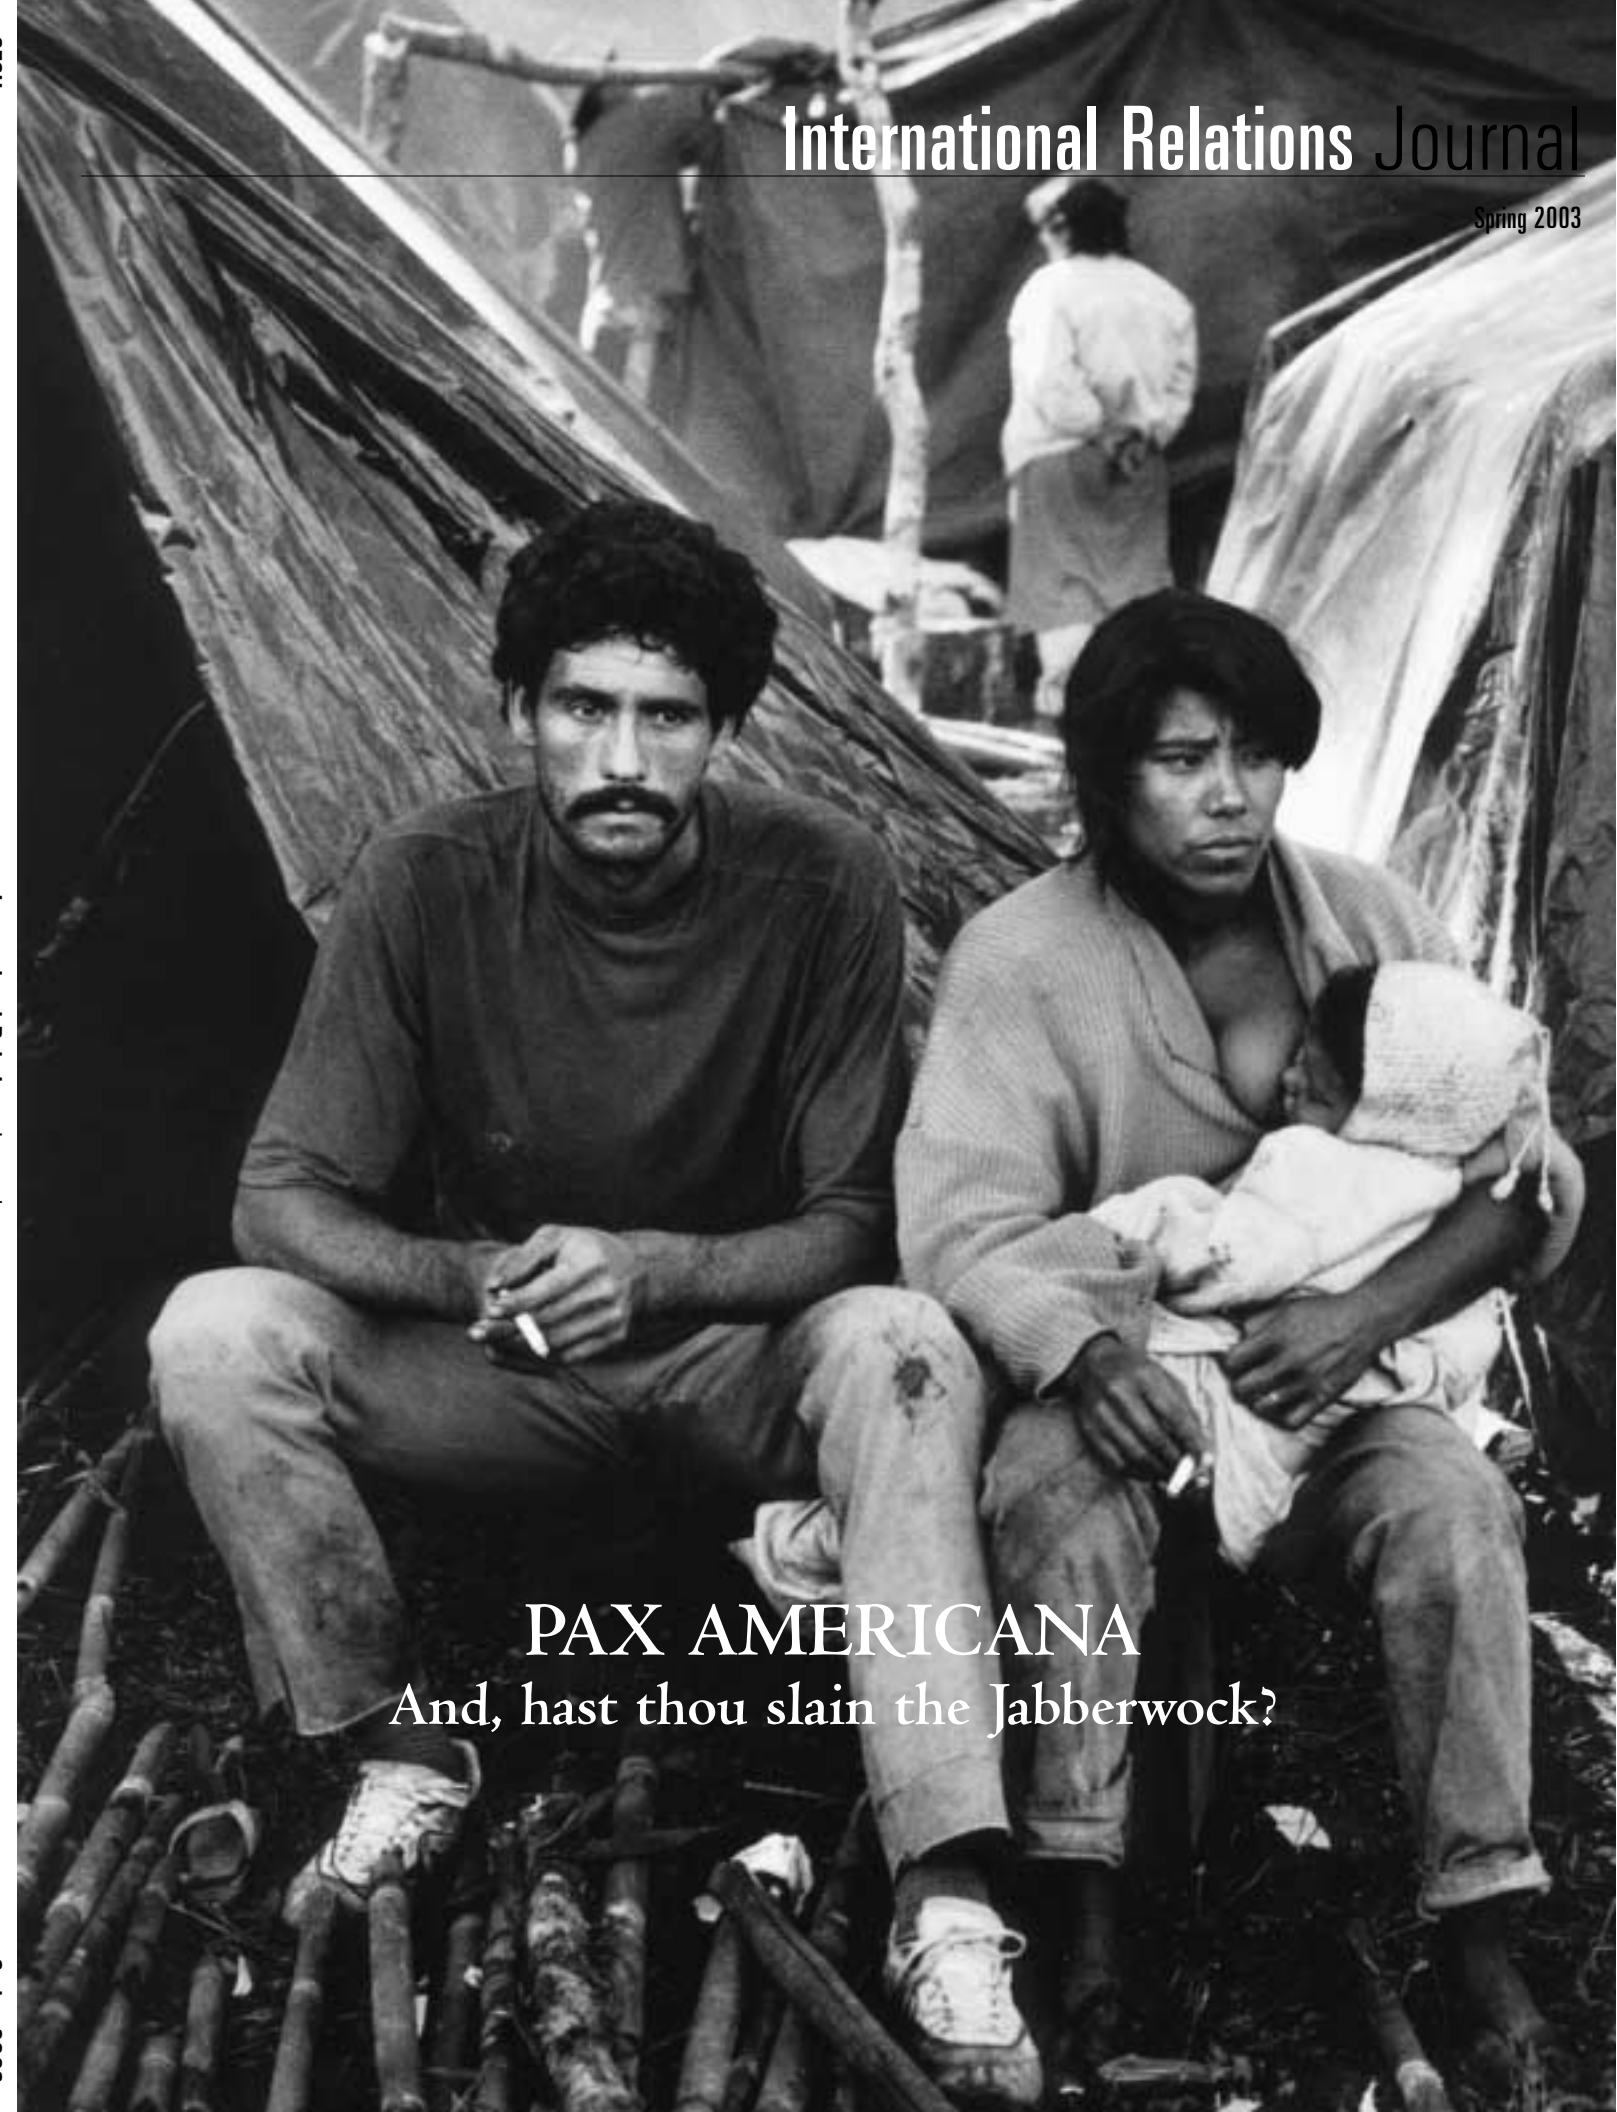

SFSU

International Relations Journal

Spring 2003

International Relations Journal

Spring 2003

PAX AMERICANA
And, hast thou slain the Jabberwock?

Shakira, above, the niece of Guantanamo prisoner Sardar Mohammad, and Bibi Gul, his sister, react to news that he is imprisoned in Cuba in August 2003. (photo by Tomas van Houtryve)

Anarchy is Freedom, What Falls to Government, There is No Government but yourself. We Are not truly free to do anything until we have realized that we are helpless. Get up and start living, turn on life and govern yourself, even you try it nothing else compares. You got one life, and its good to the last drop. Start something. DRUMMPPA/MS 2003

The Jabbercock by josh short 2003